I agree with the words Noam Chomsky: "The Internet could be a very positive step towards education, organization and participation in a meaningful society," since the Internet can really help a person to educate himself and become smarter. Any source of information can be useful if used correctly. I will prove my point

Firstly, in everyday life there are many examples proving that the Internet has become a useful tool for a person. Examples are online courses web schools and other educational resources. These platforms are very useful and play an important role in the lives of many people. In addition, the Internet provides many ways to work.

Secondly, the Internet helps to simplify the lives of people with disabilities. Services such as the delivery of food, medicine, clothes and other similar things greatly simplify a person's life. The Internet makes life easier and more practical. Like any knowledge, the Internet can be used for malicious purposes. Therefore, there are services that control the work and activities of people.

Summing up all the above, we can conclude, that the Internet is a very useful and necessary platform for people, but it must be used rationally. After all, the wrong use of the Internet can lead to wrong consequences.
